

Is your child riding in a recalled car seat?

Registering your child's car seat is the best way for the manufacturer to alert you of a recall and send you any required repair kit.

WHAT YOU NEED TO KNOW

80%

42%

80% of parents surveyed said that the car seat registration card is important, but only 42% returned the card.

WHAT YOU NEED TO DO

It's easy. Register your car seat today.

ONLINE

Register on your car seat manufacturer's website. You'll need the model number and date of manufacture found on a label on your car seat.

— OR —

BY MAIL

Fill out and mail the registration card that came with your car seat. It already includes your car seat's information. No postage required.

6 million +

In 2014, more than six million car seats were recalled for a safety defect, yet fewer than half of them were fixed.

If there is a recall, act!

If your car seat has been recalled, make any necessary repairs according to the manufacturer's instructions, so your child can ride as safely as possible.

RESOURCES

Handy tip:

Take a photo of your car seat label and save on your phone so you can have it for future reference.

Register your car seat: on your car seat manufacturer's website or www.safercar.gov/parents

Find out if your car seat is recalled:
<http://bit.ly/recalledseats>

Sign up for monthly recall email alerts:
www.safekids.org

SAFE
KIDS
WORLDWIDE™